(Law of 13 February 2018)

“Article 2-2. Obligation to perform a risk assessment

(1) The professionals shall take appropriate steps to identify and assess the risks of money laundering and terrorist financing that they face, taking into account risk factors including those relating to their customers, countries or geographic areas, products, services, transactions or delivery channels. Those steps shall be proportionate to the nature and size of the professionals.

52 Law of 27 October 2010
53 Law of 13 February 2018
54 Law of 27 October 2010
55 Law of 13 February 2018
The professionals shall apply each of the customer due diligence requirements laid down in paragraph 2. The professionals may determine the extent of such measures using a risk-based approach (RBA).

The professionals shall take into account at least the variables set out in Annex II when assessing the risks of money laundering and terrorist financing.

The professionals shall be able to demonstrate to the supervisory authorities or self-regulatory bodies that the measures they apply, in accordance with this article, Articles 3-1, 3-2 and 3-3 and their implementing measures, are appropriate in view of the risks of money laundering and terrorist financing that have been identified.

The professionals shall not rely exclusively on the central registers referred to in Article 30(3) and Article 31(4) of Directive (EU) 2015/849 to fulfil their customer due diligence requirements in accordance with this article, Articles 3-1, 3-2 and 3-3 and their implementing measures. The professionals shall fulfil those requirements by using a risk-based approach.

For life or other investment-related insurance business, in addition to the customer due diligence measures required for the customer and the beneficial owner, credit institutions and financial institutions shall conduct the following customer due diligence measures on the beneficiaries of life insurance and other investment-related insurance policies, as soon as the beneficiaries are identified or designated:

(a) in the case of beneficiaries that are identified as specifically named persons or legal arrangements, taking the name of the person;

(b) in the case of beneficiaries that are designated by characteristics or by class or by other means, obtaining sufficient information concerning those beneficiaries to satisfy the credit institution or financial institution that it will be able to establish the identity of the beneficiary at the time of the payout.

With regard to points (a) and (b) of the first subparagraph, the verification of the identity of the beneficiaries shall take place at the time of the payout. In the case of assignment, in whole or in part, of the life or other investment-related insurance to a third party, credit institutions and financial institutions aware of the assignment shall identify the beneficial owner at the time of the assignment to the natural or legal person or legal arrangement receiving for its own benefit the value of the policy assigned.

Where a credit institution or a financial institution establishes that the beneficiary of a life insurance policy which is a legal person or legal arrangement presents a higher risk, then the enhanced customer due diligence measures should include reasonable measures to identify and verify the identity of the beneficial owner of the beneficiary or the life insurance policy, at the time of payout.

In the case of beneficiaries of fiducies, trusts or of similar legal arrangements that are designated by particular characteristics or class, the professionals shall obtain sufficient information concerning the beneficiary to satisfy them that they will be able to establish the identity of the beneficiary at the time of the payout or at the time of the exercise by the beneficiary of its vested rights.

The professionals shall apply each of the customer due diligence measures set out in paragraph 2, but may determine the extent of such measures on a risk-sensitive basis depending on the type of customer, business relationship, product or transaction. The professionals shall be able to demonstrate that the extent of the measures is appropriate in view of the risks of money laundering and terrorist financing.
The verification of the identity of the customer and of the beneficial owner shall take place before the establishment of a business relationship or the carrying-out of the transaction.

However, the verification of the identity of the customer and the beneficial owner may be completed during the establishment of a business relationship if this is necessary not to interrupt the normal conduct of business and where there is little risk of money laundering or terrorist financing occurring. In such situations these procedures shall be completed as soon as practicable after the initial contact.

By way of derogation from “the first subparagraph” of this paragraph, the opening of “an account with a credit institution or financial institution, including accounts that permit transactions in transferable securities” is allowed on an exceptional basis provided that there are adequate safeguards in place to ensure that transactions are not carried out by the customer or on its behalf until full compliance with “the customer due diligence requirements laid down in points (a) and (b) of paragraph 2” is obtained. The keeping of anonymous accounts or anonymous passbooks “and accounts in obviously fictitious names” is prohibited.

The professionals who are unable to comply with paragraph 2(a) to (c) “and, where applicable, with paragraphs 2b and 2c” may not carry out a transaction through a bank account, establish a business relationship, carry out the transaction or shall terminate the business relationship and shall consider making a “suspicious transaction” report “to the Financial Intelligence Unit created by Article 13a of the Law of 7 March 1980 on the organisation of the judicial system (hereinafter, the “Financial Intelligence Unit”) at the Tribunal d’arrondissement (District Court) of Luxembourg in accordance with Article 5.”

“By way of derogation from “the first subparagraph” of this paragraph, the opening of “an account with a credit institution or financial institution, including accounts that permit transactions in transferable securities” is allowed on an exceptional basis provided that there are adequate safeguards in place to ensure that transactions are not carried out by the customer or on its behalf until full compliance with “the customer due diligence requirements laid down in points (a) and (b) of paragraph 2” is obtained. The keeping of anonymous accounts or anonymous passbooks “and accounts in obviously fictitious names” is prohibited.

The professionals who are unable to comply with paragraph 2(a) to (c) “and, where applicable, with paragraphs 2b and 2c” may not carry out a transaction through a bank account, establish a business relationship, carry out the transaction or shall terminate the business relationship and shall consider making a “suspicious transaction” report “to the Financial Intelligence Unit created by Article 13a of the Law of 7 March 1980 on the organisation of the judicial system (hereinafter, the “Financial Intelligence Unit”) at the Tribunal d’arrondissement (District Court) of Luxembourg in accordance with Article 5.”

The professionals shall also adopt risk management procedures with respect to the conditions under which a customer will be able to benefit from the business relationship before the verification of the identity.”

The professionals are required to apply the customer due diligence procedures not only to all new customers but also at appropriate times to existing customers on a risk-sensitive basis, by taking into account the existence of previous customer due diligence procedures and the moment when they are implemented, in particular, in case of relevant changes in the customer’s situation.

“The professionals shall retain the following documents, data and information for the purposes of preventing, detecting and investigating, by the Luxembourg authorities responsible for the fight...”
against money laundering and terrorist financing, possible money laundering or terrorist financing:

(a) in the case of customer due diligence, a copy of or references to the documents, data and information which are necessary to comply with the customer due diligence requirements laid down in Articles 3 to 3-3, for a period of five years after the end of the business relationship with their customer or after the date of an occasional transaction;
(b) the supporting evidence and records of transactions which are necessary to identify or reconstruct transactions, for a period of five years after the end of a business relationship with their customer or after the date of an occasional transaction.

The professionals shall also retain the information concerning the measures taken in order to identify the beneficial owners within the meaning of sub-points (i) and (ii) of point (a) of Article 1(7).

Without prejudice to longer retention periods prescribed by other laws, the professionals shall delete the personal data at the end of the retention period referred to in the first subparagraph.

In specific cases when necessary for the purpose of carrying out their relevant prudential supervisory duties under this law, the supervisory authorities may require that the professionals retain the data for a further period which cannot exceed five years.

By way of derogation from the third subparagraph, the professionals may retain the personal data for a further period of five years where this retention is necessary to effectively implement internal measures for the prevention or detection of money laundering or terrorist financing.”

(6a) The processing of personal data in accordance with this law is subject to the Law of 2 August 2002 on the protection of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data, as amended, hereinafter referred to as the “amended Law of 2 August 2002”.

Personal data shall be processed by the professionals on the basis of this law only for the purposes of the prevention of money laundering and terrorist financing and shall not be further processed in a way that is incompatible with those purposes. The processing of personal data on the basis of this law for any other purposes shall be prohibited.

The professionals shall provide new clients with the information required pursuant to Article 26(1) of the amended Law of 2 August 2002 before establishing a business relationship or carrying out an occasional transaction. That information shall, in particular, include a general notice concerning the legal obligations of the professionals under this law to process personal data for the purposes of the prevention of money laundering and terrorist financing.

Pursuant to letter (d) of Article 29(1) of the amended Law of 2 August 2002, the person who is responsible for the processing shall restrict or defer the right of access of the person concerned to his personal data where such measure is necessary in order to:

(a) enable the professionals, the Financial Intelligence Unit, a supervisory authority or a self-regulatory body to fulfil their tasks properly for the purposes of this law or its implementing measures; or
(b) avoid obstructing official or legal inquiries, analyses, investigations or procedures for the purposes of this law, its implementing measures or Directive (EU) 2015/849 and to ensure that the prevention, investigation and detection of money laundering and terrorist financing is not jeopardised.

The processing of personal data on the basis of this law shall be considered to be a matter of public interest under the amended Law of 2 August 2002.”

(7) The professionals shall pay special attention to any activity which they regard as particularly likely, by its nature, to be related to money laundering or terrorist financing and in particular

(Law of 17 July 2008)

Article 3-1. Simplified customer due diligence

(1) Where the professionals identify a lower risk of money laundering and terrorist financing, they may apply simplified customer due diligence measures.

(2) Before applying simplified customer due diligence measures, the professionals shall ascertain that the business relationship or the transaction presents a lower degree of risk.

When assessing the risks of money laundering and terrorist financing relating to types of customers, geographic areas, and particular products, services, transactions or delivery channels, the professionals shall take into account at least the factors of potentially lower risk situations set out in Annex III.

The professionals shall carry out sufficient monitoring of the transactions and business relationship to enable the detection of unusual or suspicious transactions."\(^{68}\)

(3) “(…)\(^{69}\) The professionals are required to gather sufficient information in every circumstance to determine whether the customer satisfies all of the conditions required to apply the simplified customer due diligence measures, which means that the professionals must have access to a reasonable amount of information relating to the requirements set forth in Article 3(2) and must monitor the business relationship at all times so as to ensure that the conditions for the application of Article 3-1 continue to be met. (…)\(^{70}-^{71}\)

(4) By way of derogation from points (a), (b) and (c) of Article 3(2) and Article 3(4) but without prejudice to paragraph 1 of this article, and based on an appropriate risk assessment which demonstrates a low risk, the professionals are allowed not to apply certain customer due diligence measures with respect to electronic money, where all of the following risk-mitigating conditions are met:

(a) it is not possible to reload the payment instrument or the instrument has a maximum monthly limit of EUR 250 which can be used only in Luxembourg;

(b) the maximum amount stored electronically does not exceed EUR 250. As regards the payment instruments which can be used only in Luxembourg, the limit of EUR 250 is increased to EUR 500;

(c) the payment instrument is used exclusively to purchase goods or services;

(d) the payment instrument cannot be funded with anonymous electronic money;

(e) the issuer carries out sufficient monitoring of the transactions or business relationship to enable the detection of unusual or suspicious transactions.

The derogation provided for in the first subparagraph is not applicable in the case of redemption in cash or cash withdrawal of the monetary value of the electronic money where the amount redeemed exceeds EUR 100."\(^{72}\)

(5) “If there is information available which suggests that the degree of risk is not lower, when there is a suspicion of money laundering or terrorist financing or when there is a doubt about the veracity or adequacy of previously obtained data, the application of this regime for simplified customer due diligence is not possible for these customers, products and transactions."\(^{73}\)

The scope and modalities of application of this regime for simplified customer due diligence can be modified or extended to other customers, products or transactions not listed in this article by way of grand-ducal regulation.

A grand-ducal regulation can also restrict or entirely prohibit the application of this regime for simplified customer due diligence relating the customers, products or transactions listed in this article, if this regime is not justified given the risk of money laundering or terrorist financing.

Article 3-2. Enhanced customer due diligence

(1) The professionals are required to apply, on a risk-sensitive basis, enhanced customer due diligence measures, in addition to the measures referred to in Article 3, in situations which by their nature can present a higher risk of money laundering or terrorist financing, and at least in the cases described in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4, to manage and mitigate those risks appropriately.

When assessing the risks of money laundering and terrorist financing, the professionals shall take into account at least the factors of potentially higher-risk situations set out in Annex IV.

The professionals shall examine, as far as reasonably possible, the background and purpose of all complex and unusually large transactions, and all unusual patterns of transactions, which have no apparent economic or lawful purpose. In particular, the professionals shall increase the degree and nature of monitoring of the business relationship, in order to determine whether those transactions or activities appear suspicious.

(2) When dealing with natural persons or legal entities established in third countries which do not or insufficiently apply anti-money laundering and counter terrorist financing measures, the professionals shall apply enhanced customer due diligence measures to manage and mitigate those risks appropriately.

Enhanced customer due diligence measures need not be invoked automatically with respect to branches or majority-owned subsidiaries of the professionals established in the European Union which are located in the third countries referred to in the first subparagraph, where those branches or majority-owned subsidiaries fully comply with the group-wide policies and procedures in accordance with Article 4-1 or Article 45 of Directive (EU) 2015/849. The professionals shall handle those cases by using a risk-based approach.

(3) “In the event of cross-border correspondent (…) and other similar relationships with respondent institutions in third countries and, contingent upon the assessment of a higher risk, with respondent institutions in Member States, credit institutions and other institutions involved in such relationships must:”

(a) gather sufficient information about a respondent institution to understand fully the nature of the respondent's business and to determine from publicly available information the reputation of the institution and the quality of supervision;

(b) assess the respondent institution's anti-money laundering and anti-terrorist financing controls;

(c) obtain approval from senior management before establishing new correspondent banking relationships;

(d) document the respective responsibilities of each institution;

(e) with respect to payable-through accounts, be satisfied that the respondent (…) has verified the identity of and performed ongoing due diligence on the customers having direct access to accounts of the correspondent and that it is able to provide relevant customer due diligence data to the correspondent institution, upon request.

(5) It is prohibited for “the professionals”\textsuperscript{84} to enter into or continue a correspondent (...)\textsuperscript{85} relationship with a shell bank or with a bank that is known to permit its accounts to be used by a shell bank.

It is prohibited for the professionals to rely on third parties established in countries referred to in Article 3-2(2). Third parties that are branches and majority-owned subsidiaries of the professionals established in the European Union are exempt from that prohibition, where those branches and majority-owned subsidiaries fully comply with the group-wide policies and procedures in accordance with Article 4-1 or Article 45 of Directive (EU) 2015/849.86

(3) “The professionals must refrain from carrying out transactions of which they know, suspect or have reasonable grounds to suspect to be related to money laundering, to an associated predicate offence or to terrorist financing until they have informed the Financial Intelligence Unit thereof in accordance with paragraphs 1 and 1a and have complied with any specific instructions from the Financial Intelligence Unit. The Financial Intelligence Unit may give instructions not to carry out the operations relating to the transaction or the customer.

Where refraining from carrying out transactions referred to in sub-paragraph 1 is impossible or is likely to frustrate efforts to pursue the beneficiaries of a suspected operation, the professionals concerned shall inform the Financial Intelligence Unit immediately afterwards.

Where the instruction is communicated orally, it must be followed by a written confirmation within 3 business days, otherwise the effects of the instruction cease on the third business day at midnight.

The professional is not authorised to disclose this instruction to the customer without the express prior consent of the Financial Intelligence Unit.

The Financial Intelligence Unit may order systematically and at any time the total or partial withdrawal of the order not to carry out the operations pursuant to sub-paragraph 1.”98

For the purposes of this sub-paragraph, a “network” means the larger structure to which the person belongs and which shares common ownership, management and compliance control.
